Appendix

State of Real Assets

Infrastructure

- Key growth drivers for Q2 2025 included continued demand for AI technology (boosting data center and power infrastructure), a higher focus on regional energy security impacting upstream and midstream sectors, and a drive to secure equipment and commence renewable projects by July 2026 in order to lock in generous tax credits.
- With further resolution of tariff uncertainty, private infrastructure continued to attract capital particularly for AI related infrastructure and associated power projects.

Natural Resources

- Increased supplies and fears of a slowing economy have pushed crude prices to their lowest point since energy markets were rebounding from the 2020 Covid induced downturn
- Precious metals prices have surged to record highs this year amid concerns about the future of the U.S. dollar, elevated stock valuations and uncertain interest-rate policies
- Significant LNG terminals under construction are set to increase U.S. natural gas exports, which are expected to approximately double to 27 billion cubic feet a day by 2030
- The USDA estimates a 2025 corn harvest of 16.75 billion bushels which represents an all-time high in production. Soybean production is expected to be similarly robust, even while YoY Asian exports have declined significantly.

Past performance of the investments described herein is not indicative of future results. In addition, nothing contained herein shall be deemed to be a prediction of future performance. The information included in this presentation has not been reviewed or audited by independent public accountants. Certain information included herein has been obtained from sources that Hamilton Lane believes to be reliable, but the accuracy of such information cannot be guaranteed.

This presentation is not an offer to sell, or a solicitation of any offer to buy, any security or to enter into any agreement with Hamilton Lane or any of its affiliates. Any such offering will be made only at your request. We do not intend that any public offering will be made by us at any time with respect to any potential transaction discussed in this presentation. Any offering or potential transaction will be made pursuant to separate documentation negotiated between us, which will supersede entirely the information contained herein.

Certain of the performance results included herein do not reflect the deduction of any applicable advisory or management fees, since it is not possible to allocate such fees accurately in a vintage year presentation or in a composite measured at different points in time. A client's rate of return will be reduced by any applicable advisory or management fees, carried interest and any expenses incurred. Hamilton Lane's fees are described in Part 2 of our Form ADV, a copy of which is available upon request.

The following hypothetical example illustrates the effect of fees on earned returns for both separate accounts and fund-of-funds investment vehicles. The example is solely for illustration purposes and is not intended as a guarantee or prediction of the actual returns that would be earned by similar investment vehicles having comparable features. The example is as follows: The hypothetical separate account or fund-of-funds consisted of $100 million in commitments with a fee structure of 1.0% on committed capital during the first four years of the term of the investment and then declining by 10% per year thereafter for the 12-year life of the account. The commitments were made during the first three years in relatively equal increments and the assumption of returns was based on cash flow assumptions derived from a historical database of actual private equity cash flows. Hamilton Lane modeled the impact of fees on four different return streams over a 12-year time period. In these examples, the effect of the fees reduced returns by approximately 2%. This does not include performance fees, since the performance of the account would determine the effect such fees would have on returns. Expenses also vary based on the particular investment vehicle and, therefore, were not included in this hypothetical example. Both performance fees and expenses would further decrease the return.
